

Civil society UPR shadow reporting

The role of Australian civil society in the Universal Periodic
Review

UNSW
SYDNEY

UNSW
Kingsford
Legal Centre

What is shadow reporting?

- The UPR is based on 3 main documents:
 - Information provided by the State under review
 - Information in the reports of UN human rights experts
 - Information from other stakeholders
- Civil Society Organisations are invited to submit information to the OHCHR which is then summarised – this is sometimes known as shadow reporting

What is the process?

- The OHCHR provides strict technical guidelines for CSO reports
 - Reports are due 6-8 months before the State is reviewed
 - Word limits: 2,815 for a single CSO and 5,630 for joint submissions
 - Preferred languages are English, French, or Spanish
 - Submissions cannot be anonymous or confidential
- Reports should provide credible and reliable information about the human rights situation in the State and should make S.M.A.R.T. recommendations

Why submit a report?

- To counterbalance the State report and provide a fuller picture
- To influence the review process by providing information and recommendations that can be adopted by other States
- To provide a basis for advocacy both domestically and internationally

Resources and support

- UPR Info – non-profit dedicated to supporting CSOs with the UPR process
- Resource library and online information sessions

Australia's approach to shadow reporting

The Australian Joint Civil Society Report

- A unified and collective approach
- Co-authored by human rights experts
- Divided by thematic issues
- Reviewed and edited with an intersectional focus

The last Joint NGO
Submission was endorsed by 202
organisations
across Australia

Kingsford Legal Centre's role

- Member of the coordinating committee alongside:
 - Human Rights Law Centre
 - Community Legal Centres Australia
 - Indigenous Peoples Organisation Australia

Indigenous Peoples'
Organisation-Australia

Human Rights
Law
Centre.

Community Legal Centres
Australia

The process so far

- Meeting with previously involved CSOs and the Australian Human Rights Commission in December 2024
- Online forums to get other CSOs involved and collect expressions of interest in January and February
- Expert working groups across 21 thematic issues

Next steps

- Initial draft content due 31 March
- Consolidation and edit for repetition and consistency
- Intersectional review
- Substantive review of sources
- Call out for endorsements by early June
- Final report due 26 June

Contact Us

- Oliver Ray, KLC
 - e: o.ray@unsw.edu.au
- Arif Hussein, HRLC
 - e: arif.hussein@hrlc.org.au
- Akira Naidoo, HRLC
 - akira.naidoo@hrlc.org.au
- Riley Brooke, CLCA
 - riley.brooke@clcs.org.au
- Cathy Eatock, IPOA
 - cathy.eatock@gmail.com
- General UPR email
 - upr@hrlc.org.au